

David Gruner works for Deloitte Touche Tohmatsu Limited, supporting the organization's global regulatory and public policy advocacy efforts. David works with many capital markets and public policy stakeholder groups to help position Deloitte as a leader on regulatory and other business issues and enhance its overall reputation and influence with policymakers.

Before joining Deloitte, David worked on European affairs for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, helping the Chamber's efforts to enhance the transatlantic economic partnership and smarter U.S.-EU regulatory cooperation.

Prior to this, David was a law lecturer at Örebro University, teaching courses on the EU internal market and the English common law system. David also worked for Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP in Brussels and New York, focusing primarily on antitrust/EU competition law.

David has a degree in European Union law from Leeds University, which included spending a year at Uppsala University. He holds a Bachelor's in political science from Union College (New York).